Top Tip: Researching your future career is going to require more time and effort from you than someone doing a vocational degree. Spending time during your 1 st or 2 nd year will mean you don't have to do this in the final year of your degree when you have even less spare time than you do now. It could also mean that you have time to apply for summer internships.

There are two terminologies that I'm familiar with. Sometimes, the part to the right of the decimal (cents) is called the mantissa, and the part to the left (dollars, in your metaphor), is called the characteristic.. But I also like the generic terms integer-part and fractional-part. It's what I and those with whom I do research call them (who uses the word mantissa routinely? not me, but ...
