The major challenge of both EF and PEF is that both processes are only optimum at strong acidic pH conditions (i.e. pH 2.8–3.5), which are negative and disadvantageous from the environmental point of view, since a final neutralization step may become necessary to obtain tolerable effluents [ , , , ]. Besides, efficiency of EF and PEF significantly reduced when working outside pH 2.8–3.5.

In recent years, semiconductor photocatalytic process has shown a great potential as a low-cost, environmental friendly and sustainable treatment technology to align with the “zero” waste scheme in the water/wastewater industry. The ability of this advanced oxidation technology has been widely demonstrated to remove persistent organic compounds and microorganisms in water.

Why Greywater Mistakes Don't Matter. Bad news: Greywater reuse offers much more potential benefit than are realized in most systems. Good news: Even the worst shortfalls in greywater design rarely cause actual harm, and for the few that do, it's generally insignificant. For every hundred greywater users in the US, probably 15 are achieving most of the benefit they should, eighty-some could do ...
