It's a hard question to answer because great movies are all great in more or less the same way, but each terrible movie is uniquely terrible. For instance, which one is worse, a movie that is terribly shot, stupidly written and boring, or a movie that might be decently shot and written but either has a terrible message or completely fails to do what it set out to do?

When you're promised scenes in a movie with your beau and you're completely cut from the entire film, it has to sting. While Mary Jane, played by Shailene Woodley, was not intended to be Spider-Man's main squeeze in Amazing Spider-Man 2, she was supposed to at least be mentioned in the movie. Plenty of people have no idea that this was the case, of course, since she wasn't even in it at all.

Not a tour guide but i was on a tour around Aushwitz once where two youngish (18-20 year old) Italians were taking selfies. A second thing that happened on that tour that wasn't particularly bad but was humbling was that there was an older English lady, who used a portable mobility scooter when the walking was too much, complained that some of the buildings didn't have access for it. The tour ...
