Actually the question is not quite as silly, or as impossible to answer, as all that. In common practice for loose-tube cables (there are other cable types), each tube has 12 color-coded fibers (except for "less than 12-fibers total" cables) and higher fiber count cables have multiple color-coded tubes, with fiber count stepped up in units of 12. So a 288 fiber cable will have two large units ...
