It seems to me that all other answers here (so far) fail to address the race-condition that occurs with their proposed solutions. Any code where you first check for the files existence, and then, a few lines later in your program, you create it, runs the risk of the file being created while you weren't looking and causing you problems (or you causing the owner of "that other file" problems).

"I can still feel that leap of enthusiasm, and real joy, at the prospect of finally getting out to the beach, and running around. But probably the most important thing, to me, aside from just the freedom of it and the power of it, was the kind of creatures that you could see along the beach, that you can't find anywhere else." That child's fascination with the crabs she found scurrying in the ...
