The origins of algebra can be traced to the ancient Babylonians, [page needed] who developed a positional number system that greatly aided them in solving their rhetorical algebraic equations. The Babylonians were not interested in exact solutions but approximations, and so they would commonly use linear interpolation to approximate intermediate values.

History of algebra - Wikipedia

Once we know the formula for the Law of Sines, we can look at a triangle and see if we have enough information to "solve" it. "Solving a triangle" means finding any unknown sides and angles for that triangle (there should be six total for each individual triangle). Note that we usually depict angles in capital letters, and the sides directly across from them in the same letter, but in ...
